MIND TO MIND

Creative writing that explores the abstract side of our profession and our lives

Stephen T. Harvey, M.D., Editor

Surgery: The Night After

Susan DuMond, Ph.D.

Soft light floats in from the hallway, embracing the narrow bed. I lie cradled by nurses' low laughter.

I capture the glow, Cup it in my hand, wrap Fingers around it, watch it Pulse, this heartlight.

They opened the leg.
That is yesterday's knowledge.
Tonight
I am without sensation.

Rough spots march down that thigh. A line of ants? But no, stitches. Hot to the tip of my finger. This army holds me together.

Ah! Silver socks! I see them now, Adorned and adding warmth. One silvery toe ignites the Other. Angelic fireworks.

Light dims.
Eyes close.
I send sleep to my parts as we Drift toward morning.

 $This poem is one of the finalists of {\tt ANESTHESIOLOGY'S~2019~annual~creative~writing~competition}, The {\tt Letheon.~pen2paper.susand@gmail.com.} \$

Accepted for publication January 29, 2020. Published online first on March 2, 2020.

Permission to reprint granted to the American Society of Anesthesiologists, Inc. by copyright author/owner. Anesthesiology 2020; 132:1277. DOI: 10.1097/ALN.0000000000003212